

A method of prolonging gene expression by reducing immune response to a recombinant adeno-associated virus (AAV) bearing a desired gene administered into the muscle of a mammal is described.